

Hannah Getachew

Hannah Getachew is a PhD researcher at The Dickson Poon School of Law, King's College London.

Her work examines the climate-compatibility of the African Continental Free Trade Area agreement with a view to transforming it into a tool for green growth. Alongside her studies, she serves as a Senior Editor of the King's Student Law Review.

Hannah holds a master's degree in Transnational Law from Peking University, and an undergraduate degree from Queen Mary's University in London, as well as a degree in International Development and Economics from McGill University.

In her professional career, Hannah has worked for the United Nations based Africa Climate Policy Center as a climate law and policy researcher, and for the Ethiopian government as a climate negotiator. In addition, she is the founder of Green Baobab, a platform seeking to prosper Africa by tackling environmental issues for the benefit of people and the planet.
